The POLLARD TWINS SURPRISE

By EVELYN VAN BUREN

Copyright, 1910, by the Pearson Publishing Co.

Mrs. Barry was waiting in the parlor and the twins went in there too, while Aunt Doris went out to bring in Mary Barry. The twins sat side by side on the sofa-lounge. When they heard Aunt Doris and Mary Barry coming, Mrs. Barry got up shakily. Just then the front door opened and old Mr. Barry came in. Another door from the dining room opened and Aunt Doris and Uncle Cal and a veiled lady came gaily in.

The lady raised the veil, laughing and starting forward, when from the sofa-lounge two treble voices called: "Lor-lor! Arthur's wife!"

The girl stopped, her laugh hushed, her sweet face went white.

"Mary!" called old Mrs. Barry.

"Mother!" The girl moved forward and held her mother in her arms, hiding her own face.

She looked up then at her father, who stood staring back. He did not speak. Aunt Doris eyed her niece anxiously. The girl gave her head a quick defiant toss.

"Arthur's wife be you?" he said.

"It's not so!" she tipped her head back looking at them all.

"Maybe you're not Lor-lor—you just look like her." It was the awed little voice of Narcissa.

"Be you Arthur Blood's wife, Laura Mary?" Her father asked.

The girl dropped her head and began to cry, softly; then louder and louder.

"Be you?" Her father knocked the floor with his stick.

Old Mrs. Barry moved and with her untripped arm drew her girl to her.

"Leave be, leave be," she said.

Don't cry, Laura Mary."

The girl ceased sobbing; there was a painful pause, suddenly she raised her head.

Slowly she smiled.

"I don't care—why should I? An old brook's not going to wreck our lives. I am Arthur Blood's wife—I came home to tell you, only not the very first thing. How did you get here?" She turned to the twins.

"Aunt Doris—" Narcissa began.

"Oh, you're Pollards," the girl said.

She looked at them all again, then timidly at her father.

"Arthur's started business in Middleville—we're boarding there. He's over home now, to tell his father—only he didn't intend to the first thing. We were going to visit first. I wanted to see mother, too."

"Go for the Bloods, go fetch 'em!" old Mr. Barry commanded waving his stick.

But oddly enough the Bloods, not even knocking, entered at the front door—old Samuel and his son Arthur.

"Lor-lor!" Arthur said.

They rushed together as though after a long, long separation.

Old Mr. Barry began blowing his nose. His wife hobbled over to him and caught his hand.

"The pink stone house and all my land is theirs," Samuel Blood told his old neighbor.

Suddenly the two old men grasped hands. It was a long hand shake.

The twins saw Uncle Cal nod to Aunt Doris as he moved toward Arthur and Laura Mary.

"Oh," breathed Narcissa joyously.

"Stay to supper, Sam," said Jacob Barry.

"Thank you, Jacob," Samuel Blood answered.

Of course Lor-lor had become a Blood; so that very night after a jolly supper she went home to the rich Blood's pink stone mansion. She kissed the twins good-night and laughed out:

"Just wait; my but we'll have some good times, girls."

Narcissa wrote that night:

"How heavenly everything is. The prayer for supper was long, part of it was, we thank thee oh Lord for enabling us to overcome evil of every name and nature. Lor-lor is very sweet. Arthur is a lovely husband. The fude is over too."

The Pollard twins never really forgot the pleasant days that followed in and around the pink stone mansion, even in the glorious surprise they found at home.

It was their papa who met them when their train steamed into the station.

"Wait!"

That was the only answer they could get to all their questioning. He kept smiling so happily, proudly. On the porch they found a beautiful new lacy-topped baby carriage. Valora's strength almost failed her. What was it they were to wait for? Clinging to Narcissa she went in. Grandmother Pollard sat by the window, a bundle in her arms.

"Sh!" she said. "He's asleep. Your little brother."

"The darling," whispered Valora.

"The love," echoed Narcissa. "I felt there was to be a beautiful surprise when we got home!"

IT IS NATURAL TO SQUEAL WHEN YOU ARE HURT.

Representatives of outside companies are making quite a howl because the Arizona Fire Insurance Company is taking so much business away from them. The people of Arizona, however, are being largely benefited by the success of our home company and can ignore the irritation of those who have so long drained this state of its hard earned wealth.

THE FRENCH.

Are both the artists and the artisans of the world in the making of women's wearing apparel, they also have the best system known for cleaning fashionable gowns after they are made. The French method of dry cleaning is practiced in Phoenix at the Arizona Cleaning Works owned by Mrs. Wilson. Take your fine frocks to her after they are soiled and see how pleased you will be with the result.

No fooling in our store. We sell the best

Dear Amy:--

I've bought lots of furniture from Dorris-Heyman Furniture Co., and so have many of my friends, but none of us has got fooled yet.

Isn't it a satisfaction to know that they appreciate your trade and give you good, reliable goods, at honest prices, when you buy from a store? I never will trade again at a store I cannot trust.

Baby's taking my things out of the bureau, so must close and put him to sleep.

Always your chum,

Lou.

P. S.--You can know you will not get fooled if you buy your furniture from

Dorris-Heyman Furniture Co.

Everything for the Home and Office

WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS.

Melzer Bros. are known throughout Arizona by the above title. Practically every bar in the state carries their supplies of wines, beers, and whiskies. Every Kentuckian in the new state has sampled their "Old Rutledge" and O. F. C. whiskies and pronounced them good. The latter is a 44 per cent grain, bottled in bond. Every thirsty Arizonan has tried their Budweiser, and knows the taste.

ESTABLISH A CREDIT.

There is a lot of talk about the cash system but the world's business is done on credit. A man without credit does mighty little business. There is no better way to establish a credit than to have one's checks in circulation in a community. Deposit your money in the Valley Bank of Phoenix, pay all your bills by check.

AN AMERICAN

Automobile has something new in its method of oiling. The concealed oiling system used in this machine is a decided improvement over the old manner of lubrication, its transmission and differential run in oil. If you are to purchase a new machine go over to the Standard Auto Co. and let them explain to you the merits of the American car, 25-27 N. 2nd St.

THE BIG MARKET.

On Washington street is known to every housewife who wishes to look at the meat she buys, for it is so conveniently located to the shopping district, that she stops in on her way to or from the dry goods stores. Remember this and if you haven't made it a habit to personally inspect the meat you buy get the habit by stopping in at Tribolets the next time you are down town. They sell meats, fish lobster, shrimps, fruits and vegetables.

THE MODERN HOTEL.

Is the 20th century successor of the old time inn. It necessarily lacks some of the qualities that made that place of entertainment quality charming but it has so many more conveniences that make it comfortable, that no one would wish to return to the ancient order of things. In this community, the Hotel Adams stands for all that is excellent in cuisine, service and comfort, in caring for the traveling public.

BREAD CONSUMPTION.

Is a question in which we are all personally interested. Some people may not know that the Phoenix Flour Mills sell a flour made of Arizona's soft wheat and the harder Kansas grain, that is unexcelled for making bread. They also have a pastry flour made from the grain grown in the Salt River Valley, that is rapidly becoming a favorite with the home makers of this section. Try a home product the next time you buy a sack of flour.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Many women prefer the country butter to a creamery brand because they believe it to be fresher. These housekeepers will do well to remember that the Farmer's Cooperative Creamery Co. have butter to sell brought from the home dairies of the Salt River ranchers. This company is just what its name indicates and is aiding in the material prosperity of this locality. Boost the farmer and you will build the city.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Benjamin Franklin remains one of the striking figures of the revolution. He was always a great believer in the home. When one thinks how easy it is to possess one through the Home Builders and what a pretty place Las Palmas is to live in and how close to town the new car line brings it, there is little wonder that everybody is buying there.

THE H. H. McNEIL CO.

Has done the job printing for the territory of Arizona for many years and it expects to be none the less successful in securing the printing to be done for the inhabitants of the new state. If you have programs, posters, booklets, or cards to be printed let the McNeil Co. bid on them. Its work, its prices and its materials are the best.

HOW'S YOUR HOSE?

When you buy that new hose, take a look at the "Electric" sold by D. H. Burtis. This hose was made this year, will last longer than any hose on the market because of its construction. It is a seamless tube of high grade rubber over which is braided one or more jackets of tight-twisted and cabled cotton yarn. Between each fabric is a layer of rubber the hose is then vulcanized in a mold under high pressure, driving the rubber through the cotton making it puncture proof.

A BEAUTIFUL LAWN.

Is an attraction in any country but particularly so in this where the light is extremely bright for so many months of the year. You must have a good lawn mower if you are to keep your lawn in fine shape. You can get a "Stiletto" mower this week cheap at Talbot & Hubbards. This implement is high wheeled, ball bearing, making it easy to run and quick in action. Better get your self into action while this price is on.

A BEAUTIFUL SUBURBAN HOME.

Close in on N. Central avenue, would delight your whole family. It would be located conveniently to the shopping, school, church and theater district, yet so situated that you would enjoy all the comforts of a country place. Costley and Thompson are selling a 5 acre tract piped with city water that fits this description—better buy it and erect that ideal home.

HOW IS THE BABY?

A comfortable baby is a good baby. That fact is axiomatic. A baby to be contented, must be well fed, properly clothed, kept clean and after he is old enough to wear short clothes, given a certain amount of amusement. With these thoughts in mind the window in Boehmer's Drug Store, was arranged with most every thing that could be useful or entertaining to a little one. Take a look the first time you are down town and see if there isn't something your baby needs.
